Robert Irvine talks Boston's food scene, Tom Brady and avocado ice cream

The celebrity chef will be in town for the New England Food Show.

MATT JUUL

Robert Irvine is heading back to the Hub for the 2018 New England Food Show, which kicks off this weekend at the Boston Convention & Exhibition Center. The celebrity chef and "Restaurant: Impossible" star will join "Bar Rescue" host Jon Taffer and TripAdvisor co-founder Stephen Kaufer as one of the keynote speakers at this year's festivities. Ahead of his presentation on Feb. 26, we caught up with chef Irvine to get his thoughts on Boston's food scene, Tom Brady's foray into the culinary world and if he's a fan of avocado ice cream.

Are you pumped to be coming to town for this year's New England Food Show?

I've spent a lot of time in Boston. I do an awful lot of work there with Comcast. In fact, the last year, I spent a lot of time there. I've got a lot of friends in the restaurant business there, so I'm really excited. Hopefully I get to see a couple of those friends, have a great meal, meet new friends, do the demo and have some fun. Food shows are awesome anyways, but when they're in a town like Boston, hello, it's an amazing place.

Do you have any favorite spots to grab a bite when you're in Boston?

Ming Tsai, Ken Oringer, Jasper [White], they're all friends of mine. I've known them for years. Jody [Adams], Barbara [Lynch], I've known a lot of these guys for a long time. If I get a chance to say, "Hey, come over to the demo," or let's go out for a beer, let's go out for dinner, they normally pick where we go. I just love Boston as a food city. New England's food scene has become so good. You have some great young chefs, great places popping up. I just think it's great when people work somewhere else and then either migrated to Boston or they started in Boston and worked in great places and gone on their own. I get excited with the young talent that's coming up.

How has your approach to food evolved over the years?

Because I travel so much and learn so much — I'm 52 years old, I've come of age as it were — I really understand where I fit in the food world. It's basically taking classical dishes and twisting them with my travels. I find that my restaurants, I have one in the Pentagon and one in [Las Vegas at Tropicana, and I find that the Tropicana has become my testing ground for classic dishes with twists. For example, I do a fish and chip, but I do it with a curry aioli, feta cheese and candied bacon. It's taking a classic dish and compounding that dish in all different flavors that actually go really well together. It's like drinking a beer. If you can taste what's in the beer, the chocolate, the blackberry or whatever, than the beer maker's done a great job. Each component can stand on its own, but then when you eat it together, it's like a symphony of flavors in your mouth.

Considering America has such a big obesity problem and you also focus a lot on fitness, what are your thoughts on all the recent health food trends?

Fitness means different things to different people.

"I just love Boston as a food city. New England's food scene has become so good."

I don't advocate that you go to a gym every day, lift 400 pounds and sweat until you drop. What I say is moderation of food. If you look at Bobby Flay and all these guys now on TV — Bobby's now a marathon runner, his side of food has changed dramatically — all these other guys have changed. I think it's an education of health. The country as a whole and chefs in general are changing their ways in which they make dishes and they concoct dishes. It's happening, it's slow to happen, but it's happening in major cities a little quicker than most people think.

Speaking of fitness, what do you think of Tom Brady's cookbook?

I have not seen it, but I laugh because I was in Senegal when the Super Bowl was on and one of my dear friends, Medal of Honor recipient Woody Williams, flipped the coin for the toss, and the Eagles won, and I'm an Eagles fan. I think when you see actors, actresses, sports folks — they're all into food TV now, they're all figured out, "You know what, I've been doing this all my life, maybe somebody else can benefit or maybe I can make some money from it?" Chrissy Teigen just came out with a couple of cookbooks, he's coming out with a cookbook, and I wish him well. He's lived that regimen of healthy eating and working out, obviously to be at the top that he is, because he's an amazing player. Nobody can ever take that away from him. No matter what happens in his future, whether he's on food TV or an NFL analyst, we always fall back on food. I'm sure it's a good book too.

Would you try one of his avocado ice cream recipes?

I've had avocado ice cream before. I've had olive oil ice cream before — olive oil ice cream with vanilla is amazing. [A few years ago], I did 85 days of eating an avocado, ate a different way every day. So, I'm a lover of avocado. It's a good fat. You can do anything with it. It's like having a plain canvas, you can add and take away. I like all that stuff. It's an adventurous way to serve ice cream. Is it healthy? It's got healthy fat in it, but it's not necessarily healthy.

Where to celebrate National Clam Chowder Day in Boston

It's chowdah time. MATT JULI

Because clam chowder is a staple of New England cuisine, it's only right that there's a foodie holiday dedicated to beloved seafood soup. Celebrate National Clam Chowder

Day on Sunday, Feb. 25, and grab a bowl at one of these awesome restaurants around Boston.

Atlantic Fish Co.
Located in the heart of Back Bay, this acclaimed seafood restaurant serves up a lot of clam chowder every year. In 2017, Atlantic Fish Co. used a whopping 5,000 lbs. of potatoes just for its take on the soup. Featuring clams sourced right from Boston Harbor and stuffed in a delicious bread boule, stop by and see what the hype's all about.

761 Boylston St., atlanticfish.com

The Barking Crab
This Seaport hotspot has won numerous awards for its chowdah over the years. In honor of National Clam Chowder Day, guests can slurp up a free cup of the soup with any food or drink purchase on Sunday.
88 Sleeper St., barkingcrab.com

Island Creek Oyster Bar
There's a lot of great seafood options on Island Creek Oyster Bar's menu, but its clam chowder is perennially named one of the best in the city by food critics. Made with house-smoked bacon and topped with buttermilk biscuits instead of saltines, the Kenmore restaurant puts a decadent spin on the fan-favorite soup.

500 Commonwealth Ave., islandcreekoysterbar.com

Legal Sea Foods
The seafood chain's chowder has been a longtime favorite of presidents since the era of Ronald Reagan, most recently being served at Donald Trump's inauguration festivities. Locals can feast on Legal Sea Foods' commander-in-chief worthy soup at locations around the country.
Various locations, legalseafoods.com

Moon Bar
Mooncusser Fish House's casual bar has quite the deal in honor of National Clam Chowder Day. Featuring clams, smoked scallops, skate and topped with moon-shaped crackers, chef Carolyn Johnson's Mooncusser Chowder will be available for just $5 starting at 4 p.m. on Feb. 26. 304 Stuart St., moonbarboston.com

Ned Devine's
This Irish pub in Faneuil Hall surprisingly has one of the best New England-style clam chowders in the city. Ned Devine's soup is a three-time winner of the Boston Harborfest Chowderfest contest.

'Waitress' star plans to bake up a good time in Boston

The hit musical is back in town, MATT JULI

While Desi Oakley has already shown off her musical chops in a slew of Broadway productions like "Wicked" and "Les Misérables" over the years, there's something special about her latest role as Jenna Hunterton in the national tour of "Waitress."

The actress and singer-songwriter stars as the fan-favorite pie maker in the Tony Award-nominated musical, which kicked off its run at the Boston Opera House this week. Since the production originally debuted at Cambridge's American Repertory Theatre in 2015 before making the move to Broadway, Oakley couldn't be more excited to bring "Waitress" back to the Bay State.

"Honestly, it's a dream come true," Oakley says. "Especially coming to Boston where the heart of the story was born."

Based on the Keri Russell-starring 2007 indie flick of the same name, "Waitress" tells the story of Jenna, a young woman who works in a small town diner and is trapped in a relationship with her abusive husband. Things get complicated when Jenna gets pregnant and ends up falling in love with her gynecologist. In order to cope with her situation, Jenna enters a pie contest, in hopes that the grand prize is her ticket out.

Although the musical numbers and smells of freshly baked desserts makes for an entertaining night out at the theater, Oakley believes that fans have gravitated toward the production because of its extremely relatable protagonist.

"I call her the every woman," Oakley says. "No one has written a book about her. Her skin isn't green. She's really relatable. She's sort of just like all of us."

The actress says that preparing for "Waitress" was just as much fun as performing it onstage. Like Jenna, Oakley's mother taught her how to bake pies, and even flew all the way out to

New York in order to get her ready for the role, using her great-grandmother's tart cherry pie recipe.

"My mother got on a plane and threw a rolling pin in her suitcase and flew to New York City," Oakley says. "She taught me how to bake a pie in my studio apartment."

"I've never made a pie before," she adds. "I thought it was really special. It was her idea."

Overall, Oakley has loved every minute of her "Waitress" experience and is proud of the fact that the production features an all-female creative team, including Sara Bareilles. The Grammy winner, who's currently playing Jenna on Broadway, wrote the music and lyrics for the show.

"They didn't necessarily go out saying, 'Let's make this an all female cast,' they just chose the best people for the job and it happened to be all women," Oakley says. "I think that idea is so powerful."

Robert Reich: Trump 'is the antithesis of the common good'

The former secretary of labor brings his book tour to town this weekend.

MATT JUUL

In such politically divisive times, Robert Reich believes America still has a chance find some common ground. While the acclaimed writer and former secretary of labor believes we've lost a sense of the common good in the age of Donald Trump, he still has hope for the future. Ahead of his trip to Cambridge this weekend in support of his new book, "The Common Good," we caught up with the former Harvard professor and one-time Massachusetts gubernatorial candidate to talk about bridging the gap between today's political factions, overcoming cynicism and more.

Why did you want to write about the loss of the common good?

One of the biggest characteristics of the age we're in is the absence of any concept of the common good. Certainly, the biggest contrast between America of the period between, say, 1932 and 1980 versus what's happened since then, is the disintegration of what might be understood as the common good. And Donald Trump is the embodiment of that disintegration. Everything he does and says is the antithesis of the common good, but he's not the cause of the decline.

Is focusing on a common economic agenda the key to bridging the divide between both sides of the aisle?

Yes. The economic disparities have kind of grown into a chasm. Since the late 1970s, most people have not had a raise if you adjust for inflation. In fact, most families have been on a downward escalator, even though the economy as a whole has continued to expand. Most of the gains have gone to the wealthy, and with those gains have come a lot of political power to rig the game in their favor. The election of 2016 was a watershed in this respect because both Donald Trump and Bernie Sanders, the most improbable candidates you could imagine, emphasized the rigging of the game and really rode a populist wave. I think Trump did it much more cynically, obviously, because once in office, he continued to pander to the rich and his wealthy friends, lobbyists, Wall Street and so forth. But nobody looking at America in recent decades of American history can mistake what has happened and why it's important for the Democrats, if they want to get back the votes, to advance what might be called democratic populism.

In the face of so much political cynicism, do you have any hope for the future?

Cynicism is the great enemy of positive social change. When too many people become cynical about the possibility of change, the impossibility becomes a self-fulfilling prophecy and the special interests end up running everything. But if you look at American history, you see great cycles. A lot of people at the end of the 19th century were cynical about the possibility of change because great fortunes were in the hands of very few giant corporations and robber barons. Much of the middle class had been hollowed out, the working class was heading on a very steep downward trajectory. The poor were in a terrible plight. Our politics were terribly corrupted by money and there were very dangerous working conditions ...

We as a nation rejected that future or that trend. We insisted on a better America for everyone. We reasserted equal political minds and equal opportunity and regulations against impure foods and drugs, a progressive incomes tax and a vote for women, that women fought very hard for. We launched the country. I think we'll do the same. I think that's the pattern in our history.

Could roommates help college students get the mental health services they need?

Researchers at NYU looked at how college students understand their roommates' levels of distress, which may lead to a better safety net for students suffering from severe stress. KRISTIN TOUSSAINT

It's no secret that college students are under a lot of stress, but getting those students to seek help still proves to be a challenge.

Roommates may be the key to connecting students to the mental health support they need, according to a new study out of New York University.

"This is a really important topic. College should be an exciting moment of people's lives, but oftentimes you see a lot of college kids experiencing a lot of stress and difficulties, including social and academic [challenges]," said Qi Xu, a doctoral student in NYU's Department of Psychology. "Sometimes, there's really bad outcomes that could lead to."

Suicide is a leading cause of death among college students in the United States, according to the Suicide Prevention Research Center. Schools do have mental health initiatives and outreach efforts, but Xu and other NYU researchers wondered if roommates could help.

"Often, college and universities are pretty proactive in reaching out to students, providing different counseling services for mental health problems, but students hesitate about whether they should seek out this support," Xu said.

Resident assistants (RAs) in dorms are commonly trained to spot signs of mental health concerns, but since roommates tend to spend more time together, they might have better insight into each others' emotions.

Researchers asked more than 180 pairs of roommates at multiple universities to first rate their own level of distress and then rate how distressed they thought their roommates were.

Students were pretty sensitive to the mental suffering their roommates felt — and tend to think that that distress level matches their own — but they're still underestimating how stressed out their roommates actually are, the study found.

This is useful insight, Xu said, because if people tend to under rate their roommates, it means schools might need to pay extra attention to when students do report something.

Since regular students might not know what to do in these situations,

Roommates should be trained to spot signs of distress so they can help each other get the mental health support they need, new research suggests. ISTOCK

the researchers suggested roommates be trained, like the RAs are, to spot signs of distress.

"More universal training on how to identify and respond to the distress of peers might have the benefit of encouraging conversations among roommates about what actions each might take if he or she notices another experiencing extreme distress," the researchers wrote in their paper, published Monday in the journal Personality and Social Psychology Bulletin.

Xu considered that putting an added responsibility on students' shoulders to watch out for their roommates' well-being may add to their own stress levels, but she said that previous research has shown that those who are providing support for others experience a psychological benefit, as well.

Ultimately, more research needs to be done, and Xu believes this is worth looking into.

"I think this is a really important topic not only from a research perspective but for the general implication, for the community health of universities," she said. "I hope our research can lift up and ... draw public attention to these topics."

Homes are sold by lottery. Only qualified applicants may enter. The property is deed-restricted; owner-occupancy and rental requirements apply. Qualified applicants must be first-time homebuyers and complete an approved homebuyer education course prior to closing. Minimum household size requirement is number of bedrooms minus one, but a preference is given to households with one person per bedroom. Income limits for qualified buyers are based on 80% and 100% Area Median Income Limits as defined by HUD. This information is subject to change. Preference given to Boston residents.

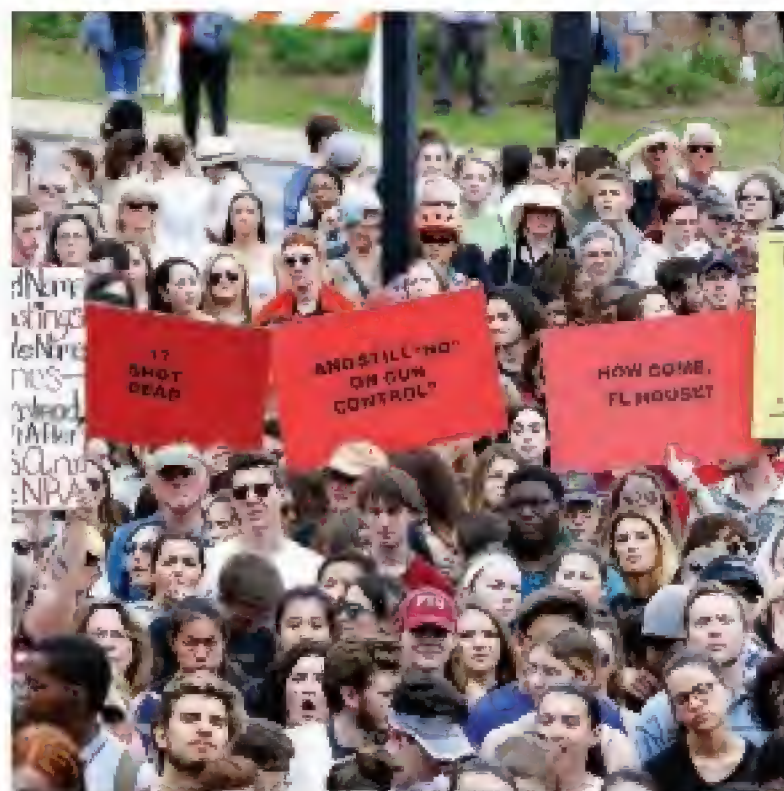

Florida school massacre survivors rally for assault gun ban

"We want to see some common sense gun laws so this will never happen again," said shooting survivor Rachel Padnis.

Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School in Parkland, Florida, became the latest school targeted by a gunman using a semi-automatic AR-15 assault rifle, stirring the nation's long-running debate about gun rights and public safety.

Dressed in jeans and T-shirts and carrying signs with the slogan "#Neveragain," survivors of the Feb. 14 mass shooting met with lawmakers in Tallahassee, to ask for stricter controls on gun sales.

Investigators said the assault was carried out by 19-year-old former student Nikolas Cruz, who purchased an AR-15 nearly a year ago. Police have charged Cruz, who had been kicked out of Douglas for disciplinary problems, with 17 counts of premeditated murder.

"We want to see some common sense gun laws so this will never happen again," said Rachel Padnis, a 16-year-old sophomore from the school near Fort Lauderdale.

dale.

President Donald Trump, a strong supporter of gun rights, was due to meet later Wednesday with parents, students and teachers who have been victims of gun violence, including those affected by the Valentine's Day shooting in Florida.

The White House meeting comes a day after Trump said his administration would take steps to ban bump stocks, an accessory that enables a rifle to shoot hundreds of rounds a minute. A spokeswoman said the administration was open to the idea of setting national age limits on sales of assault rifles.

The state Senate on Wednesday postponed discussion on a proposed gun control bill. The legislative session wraps up on March 9, leaving lawmakers little time to act.

Curling: What I learned about the Olympic sport by trying it

 Curling really is a surprisingly accessible, playable sport. EVAN MACY

 A Metro reporter in Philadelphia found that curling was both challenging, easier than he expected, and surprisingly alluring. ERIK STUBER-MACY

Sports aren't really that relatable. There are barriers to entry.

I can't really safely speed down an icy track at 80 miles per hour. I can't do a "backside triple cork 1440" or descend down a mountain slope 2.17 miles in one minute and 40 seconds. And where would I even find a huge track or halfpipe?

I'm not going to get to experience anything I've seen over the last two weeks in the Winter Olympics — especially not living in Southeastern Pennsylvania.

Except for Curling. Here's what I learned about curling, as I got a brief lesson from some experts.

1 The ice

It's called pebbled ice. They have a machine that does it, it's not a zamboni. Watch closely on TV and you'll see the rough texture of the ice and it's of subtle but significant importance. You don't really slip and slide, you sort of glide and with more control when wearing what are either special shoes or shoe coverings — to make you more agile in the surface. And then the idea of slowly moving 42-pound stones make more sense.

"Throwing a stone requires a lot less force than you'd think," Ian Alexander, a curler from King of Prussia told me. "It's much more finesse."

2 The physics

The stone has a convex bottom so that very little of it touches the ice. A little bit of rotation makes the stone turn as it slides. The ice is rough, pebbled, as mentioned before, so the sweeping actually smooths the ice so that the stone moves further and literally curls it. Like in billiards, knowing how hard and at what angle to hit a stone can help you score.

"A certain personality. I don't know what it is, is attracted to this sport," Kevin Strayer, who has curled for a decade said. "It's a lot of engineers, doctors, scientific type people. All the angles are just like shooting pool."

3 The camaraderie

I never thought of it before, but the sport really lends itself to social interaction and fun. It reminds me of bowling, but with more of a team approach. And I love playing with teams. Curling matches typically consist of two teams of four playing eight or 10 ends. You can't exactly hold a beer while playing.

"It's a very friendly, gentleman sport," Strayer said. "You call your own fouls, it's social, after the game the two teams sit together, winner buys the first round and loser buys the second round."

4 It's really not hard

Balance is key, so is technique. Both can be learned over repetition. The strategy comes later, and it one of the more exciting parts of the game.

"Curling is easy to learn but tough to master," Alexander said. "[Learning] strategy and tactics and so on will take years. People get better and better over time. It takes a lot of practice."

The blue city of Chefchaouen may be ancient but has a modern feel thanks to the visitors drawn to its Instagram-ready streets. ALL PHOTOS BY GETTY

Everything there is to see in the North African gem.

Fodor's Travel

From the rugged Atlas Mountains to the laid-back surfing beaches, Morocco is a country full of delights. Get lost in the souks, ride a camel through the desert, and indulge in traditional cuisine—in this magical part of the world, all your wanderlust dreams can come true.

Go camel-trekking

Mount a dromedary camel to explore the undulating orange dunes and abandoned kasbahs of the desert, a magical region immortalized in film and fiction. Camel rides are also available in Marrakesh (near the Menara Gardens) and on Essaouira beach if your itinerary doesn't include the desert.

Sip mint tea

Make like a local and install yourself on a cafe terrace for a fortifying mint tea and a dose of people watching. Tea (sometimes called Berber whiskey) is the essential social lubricant in Morocco, and this sugary sweet pick-me-up is used to welcome visitors and seal deals.

Camp in the Sahara

For a once-in-a-lifetime experience, escape into the world of the Berber nomads and explore these windswept Saharan dunes stretching 19 miles and rising to 820 feet. Select an overnight tour to stay in a Bedouin tent in the Erg Chebbi or Erg Chigaga desert wilderness. Sleep beneath the stars and wake to spectacular sunrises.

Get pampered at a hammam

Getting scrubbed and steamed at a local hammam does wonders for the weary. Whether you choose a communal public bath or private room in an upscale spa, this traditional therapy of brisk exfoliation and bathing using natural cleansers has promoted physical and mental hygiene and restoration for centuries. Public hammams are clean and inexpensive.

Step into a hammam for a relaxing afternoon.

Visit a Berber village

In many ways, life for semi-nomadic Berbers in the mountains and deserts of Morocco is not much easier today than it was for their forefathers. Morocco's indigenous people take great pride in their way of life and are incredibly hospitable to passing visitors, where you can witness bread being baked in outdoor ovens and the lifestyle of families living close to nature. Many tour operators combine lunch or tea with a Berber family with a one day trek or a visit to a local market.

Trek the Mountains of the High Atlas

For spectacular vistas and fresh air, the High Atlas is a perfect getaway from the hustle and bustle of urban Morocco. North Africa's tallest peak, Djebel Toubkal, rises to nearly 14,000 feet and is only a two-day climb, best done in late summer. Amateur hikers with guides follow less strenuous but equally rewarding routes through rural Berber villages and rocky paths.

Explore the Old City of Fez el-Bali

Step into a time warp in Fez, a ninth-century medina, and the world's most active medieval city. With culturally important fondouks, riads, medersas, mosques, and palaces dating back 1,000 years filling the 9,500 alleyways, it's no surprise Fez el-Bali is a UNESCO World Heritage Site.

Instagram the Blue City

Founded in the 15th century by Spanish exiles, the village of Chefchaouen, in the foothills of the Rif Mountains, is widely considered to be one of Morocco's most picturesque places. Relax beneath verdant shady trees on the cobblestoned Plaza Uta el-Hamman and wander the steep Andalusian passageways, where buildings bathed in cobalt and indigo hues blend with terracotta-tiled roofs and ocher-and-poppy-red wool carpets to create a vibrant canvas.

Visit the Hassan II Mosque

One of the largest mosques in the world is in Casablanca, covering almost a million square feet and holds up to 25,000 people. Two-thirds of the building is over the sea, where the minaret's light beacon shines 20 miles towards Mecca. It ranks as the country's most exceptional representation of Moroccan artistry for its ornate carved stucco, zellij tile work (a type of mosaic), and onyx-and-marble details.

DON'T BE OVERJOYED ABOUT THIS JD MARTINEZ DEAL YET

@dannypicard

I want to like the J.D. Martinez signing. I really do.

He hit 45 home runs in 119 games last season. He was third in all of baseball in 2017 with an OPS of 1.066, behind Aaron Judge and Mike Trout. And the Boston Red Sox are in need of some power after hitting just 168 home runs last year, the fourth-lowest home-run total in the majors.

But I can't get over the fact that Martinez and the Red Sox need each other much more than they may actually want each other. So it seems.

When Martinez's five-year, $110 million deal was announced earlier this week, the perception was that Red Sox president of baseball operations Dave Dombrowski had reaped the benefits of staying patient.

Patience is a virtue, in this case, but only because nobody else wanted to pay the 30-year-old slugger.

In early February,

Ken Rosenthal reported that Martinez was "fed up" with the Red Sox and their reported $100 million offer. Martinez's agent, Scott Boras, immediately denied that his client had expressed those feelings.

Now, the two sides have agreed to a contract, and you'll hear about all the good things Martinez will bring to the Red Sox, as they try to win their third straight division title. What you won't hear is that Martinez is only coming to Boston because nobody wanted to pay him what a 40-home-run hitter is usually worth.

Martinez's undeniable power is really all I can tell you about the guy. I honestly don't know why there wasn't much of an attempt from the rest of the league to sign him. Perhaps it's because he's missed 85 games in the last two years combined. Or maybe it's because he's averaged 140 strikeouts per season the last four seasons, including a whopping 178 strikeouts in 2015.

You could say I'm nit-picking here. But given his highly acclaimed home-run power, it's a little confusing as to why there wasn't more interest for Martinez on the free-agent market.

J.D. Martinez is the signing of the offseason for the Sox, but did he come here out of desperation? GETTY IMAGES

Collusion? The Boras effect? Teams saving for next winter's free-agent bonanza? All of the above?

Who really knows. All I'm saying is, it feels strange.

But because of that lack of interest, Martinez has fallen right into the Red Sox' lap at the beginning of spring training. The Sox played it right by not bidding against themselves, so they should be praised for their patience, for sure. I'm just curious to know if they would've actually got involved in a bidding war at all, had another team been willing to beat the Red Sox'

$110 million offer.

One thing we know about Dombrowski is that if he wants something, he's going to go get it. See Chris Sale, David Price, and Craig Kimbrel as just a few examples. If Dombrowski thought offensive power was such a major need for the team, and a 40-home-run hitter that he coveted was a free agent, I find it hard to believe he would've waited until everybody arrived at spring training to finalize a deal with him.

Again, don't bid against yourself. I understand that concept completely. But it's called a negotiation for a reason. Martinez wanted one thing. The Red Sox offered another. If Dombrowski was all-in on Martinez, why not just get on the phone or get in a room and work something out? By waiting it out, the risk of losing a player you covet is much greater than the reward of being praised for patience.

And hey, it's always good to get your guy. But whose guy is he? Is he ownership's guy? Is he Dombrowski's guy? And if another team offered Martinez a $140 million over five years, would he end up being somebody else's guy?

Weird to think that the latter is probably true.

That said, I want to like this signing. I honestly do. I just can't help but think that Martinez is only in Boston because nobody else wanted him.

And that doesn't get me too fired up.

SEND IT IN, JAROME

Could Jarome Iginla sign with the Bruins in the next few days?

It's entirely possible as Iginla actually practiced with the Providence Bruins this week and is looking to latch on with an NHL team before Monday's trade deadline. The 40-year-old Iginla is coming off of hip surgery and it's unclear if he can "still go."

Just two years ago, Iginla had a 47-point season with the Avalanche.

In the 2013-14 season (his only season in Boston), Iginla registered 61 points.

Iginla bought a home just outside of Boston this past summer, adding fuel to the speculation.

While an Iginla return to the Hub would make for a fun story, most Bruins fans would rather see the team add a young, star defenseman like Florida's Dmitry Kulikov in the next few days.

REALITY SHOW

WWE has always been at its best when it blurs the lines between fake and reality. They are certainly doing that these days as the biggest male draw on their cards continues to be former UFC heavy-weight champion Brock Lesnar, and now Ronda Rousey — the former UFC women's bantam-weight champion — is their top female draw.

Typically, top pro wrestlers also have to have the gift of gab as well as in-ring ability. But Lesnar has long had manager Paul Heyman do his talking for him. It's likely that Rousey will have to have a similar mouth-piece (maybe Heyman himself?) considering her bleep-talking so far seems to be substandard.

It's a shame that the "UFC guy" with the best mic skills is former WWE champ CM Punk. Lesnar had a UFC bout a year and a half ago while under contract to WWE. Would be great if Rousey could work out a similar deal and if Punk could mercifully get out of the Octagon and back into the squared circle.

NO BRINKS TRUCK FOR IT

Jettisoned Celtics point guards have had a rough go of it in recent years. Isaiah Thomas is currently averaging 10.6 points per game with the hapless Lakers, and before IT it was Rajon Rondo who saw his career take a nosedive immediately after leaving Boston.

Rondo will never get back to his "triple double every other night" days and it already seems as though Thomas' as not only an MVP candidate but even an NBA starter are in serious jeopardy. Thomas will hit free agency this summer, and no team in the league will even entertain giving him the max contract he coveted for the past few years.

The Lakers aren't going to re-sign him as he plays the same position as rookie Lonzo Ball and the Lakers want to take a serious run at LeBron James this summer. Having Thomas still on the roster would certainly hinder those plans.

Slumping C's look to pick things up after ASG

The Celtics visit the Pistons and Knicks this weekend before a short return home.

MATTHEW BURKE
matthew.burke@metro.us

The NBA All-Star break came at the exact right time for the Celtics, a team that's suffered through a four-game losing streak and a three-game losing streak in the past month alone.

Despite the ugly stretch, the C's are still just two games behind the Toronto Raptors for first place in the Eastern Conference and can make up that ground in the next week alone as they have four games in six nights.

The first test will come Friday night in Detroit as the C's face the now-

Blake Griffin-led Pistons.

"I think teams have outplayed us," Celtics head coach Brad Stevens said before the break of his team. "I've said all along I don't think we're all that we were cracked up to be during our 16-game winning streak and it's probably hit us more in the past month that it hit us before. Teams have outplayed us; good teams have outplayed us."

The Celtics are at their best when they are able to move the basketball and not get caught in a 1-on-1 game with Kyrie Irving as the focal point. Make no mistake, Irving is their best player — but he doesn't need to be scoring 30 points for the C's to be effective.

In the past six games that Irving has eclipsed the 30-point mark, the Celtics have lost.

"This [time of year] the stakes are at their highest," Irving said. "Teams are starting to shape into what they're going to be going into the playoffs. And that's where my focus is. So obviously the last month we've had some slippage. But my focus is how to get the group to be better. Teams are raising their level. I have to figure out a way to get this group to another gear. Other teams are starting to get their gears. It's about time."

Following Friday night's tilt against the Pistons, the C's will play in Manhattan on Saturday night against the Knicks. Boston will return home Monday to face the Grizzlies and will host the Hornets 48 hours later.

Vitamin B1 (Thiamine) After Cardiac Arrest Study

Learn about this post cardiac arrest study that may affect you or someone you know.

Cardiac arrest is an emergency condition in which your heart and breathing stop, requiring cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) to restart the heart. Sudden cardiac arrest affects approximately 300,000 people annually in the U.S.

Thiamine After Cardiac Arrest (THACA) is an emergency medicine research study designed to determine if Vitamin B1 (Thiamine) can improve survival and prevent brain injury in patients who have had a cardiac arrest. There are currently no medications known to have a beneficial effect on post-arrest outcome, and brain injury and death are very common. Vitamin B1 deficiency is not uncommon after cardiac arrest, and deficiency is known to cause brain injury in other settings. This research study is taking place at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center and will last for approximately 4-5 years. Participants who are brought to the hospital after a cardiac arrest and are enrolled in this study will be randomly assigned to receive Vitamin B1 or placebo (no active medication) for two days after suffering a cardiac arrest.

Because of the importance of administering Vitamin B1 (Thiamine) as soon as possible after cardiac arrest in order to maximize the chance of finding a benefit, this study will be conducted under exception from informed consent (EFIC) in accordance with the federal Food and Drug Administration (FDA) regulations. EFIC is allowed only when testing possible treatments for life-threatening conditions for which there is no alternative proven treatment, when obtaining consent is not possible because the study treatment must be administered quickly and a legally authorized representative of the patient is not present or reachable.

When legally authorized representatives are available to provide consent, research staff will obtain consent prior to enrollment. For participants enrolled under EFIC, they or their representatives will be notified of enrollment as soon as possible and asked if they would like to continue participation, with the option to withdraw from the study at any time.

The purpose of this handout is to notify our community about this study and to provide contact information and resources where you can learn more. If you do not wish to be a participant in this study, please visit the website below or call the number listed below to find out how you can opt out. Individuals who opt out will be sent a bracelet and the study team will maintain a list of these individuals to ensure they are not enrolled under EFIC.

RESPONDENT

Alleged Incapacitated Person

To the named Respondent and all other interested persons, a petition has been filed by Sandra N. Sagastume of Boston, MA in the above captioned matter alleging that Emelda L. Sagastume is in need of a Guardian and requesting that Sandra N. Sagastume of Boston, MA (or some other suitable person) be appointed as Guardian to serve WITHOUT Surety on the bond.

Suffolk Probate and Family Court

24 New Chardon Street, Boston, MA 02114

The petition asks the court to determine that the Respondent is incapacitated, that the appointment of a Guardian is necessary, and that the proposed Guardian is appropriate. The petition is on file with this court and may contain a request for certain specific authority.

You have the right to object to this proceeding. If you wish to do so, you or your attorney must file a written appearance at this court on or before 10:00 A.M. on the return date of 02/22/2018. This day is NOT a hearing date, but a deadline date by which you have to file the written appearance if you object to the petition. If you fail to file the written appearance by the return date, action may be taken in this matter without further notice to you. In addition to filing the written appearance, you or your attorney must file a written affidavit stating the specific facts and grounds of your objection within 30 days after the return date.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

The outcome of this proceeding may limit or completely take away the above-named person's right to make decisions about personal affairs or financial affairs or both. The above-named person has the right to ask for a lawyer. Anyone may make this request on behalf of the above-named person. If the above-named person cannot afford a lawyer, one may be appointed at State expense.

WITNESS, Hon. Brian J. Dunn, First Justice of this Court.

THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
MASSACHUSETTS DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION - HIGHWAY DIVISION
NOTICE OF A PUBLIC HEARING
Project File No. 605789

A Design Public Hearing will be held by MassDOT to discuss the proposed reconstruction of Melnea Cass Boulevard project in Boston, MA.

WHERE: Boston Water and Sewer Commission
980 Harrison Avenue, Roxbury, MA 02119

WHEN: Thursday, March 1st @ 7:00PM

PURPOSE: The purpose of this hearing is to provide the public with the opportunity to become fully acquainted with the proposed Reconstruction of Melnea Cass Boulevard project. All views and comments made at the hearing will be reviewed and considered to the maximum extent possible.

PROPOSAL: The mile long Complete Streets focused Reconstruction of Melnea Cass Boulevard project looks to enhance public safety and provide multi-modal travel options for all users while serving the regional traffic demand on the corridor. The project will reconstruct all pedestrian and bicycle facilities, reconstruct roadway pavements, update traffic signal equipment, enhance storm-water management, invest in landscape architecture, and include protected intersections. The proposed typical roadway cross-section will include two 10.5 foot travel lanes in each direction with 10.5 foot turning lanes. Sidewalks ranging from 7 to 8 feet in width will be provided along both sides of the Boulevard. Bicycle accommodations consisting of 6 to 8 feet wide separated bike lanes are provided in accordance with applicable design guides.

A secure right-of-way is necessary for this project. Acquisitions in fee and permanent or temporary easements may be required. The City of Boston is responsible for acquiring all needed rights in private or public lands. MassDOT's policy concerning land acquisitions will be discussed at this hearing.

Written views received by MassDOT subsequent to the date of this notice and up to five (5) days prior to the date of the hearing shall be displayed for public inspection and copying at the time and date listed above. Plans will be on display one-half hour before the hearing begins, with an engineer in attendance to answer questions regarding this project. A project handout will be made available on the MassDOT website listed below.

Written statements and other exhibits in place of, or in addition to, oral statements made at the Public Hearing regarding the proposed undertaking are to be submitted to Patricia A. Leavenworth, P.E., Chief Engineer, MassDOT, 10 Park Plaza, Boston, MA 02116, Attention: Highway Design, Project File No. 605789. Such submissions will also be accepted at the hearing. Mailed statements and exhibits intended for inclusion in the public hearing transcript must be postmarked within ten (10) business days of this Public Hearing. Project inquiries may be emailed to dot.feedback.highway@state.ma.us

This location is accessible to people with disabilities. MassDOT provides reasonable accommodations and/or language assistance free of charge upon request (including but not limited to interpreters in American Sign Language and languages other than English, open or closed captioning for videos, assistive listening devices and alternate material formats, such as audio tapes, Braille and large print), as available. For accommodation or language assistance, please contact MassDOT's Chief Diversity and Civil Rights Officer by phone (857-368-8580), fax (857-368-0602), TDD/TTY (857-368-0603) or by email (MassDOT.CivilRights@dot.state.ma.us). Requests should be made as soon as possible prior to the meeting, and for more difficult to arrange services including sign-language, CART or language translation or interpretation, requests should be made at least ten (10) business days before the meeting.

In case of inclement weather, hearing cancellation announcements will be posted on the internet at <http://www.massdot.state.ma.us/highway/>

OF A GUARDIAN OF AN INCAPACITATED PERSON AND/OR CONSERVATOR

Docket No. SU05PD2076H

Commonwealth of Massachusetts
The Trial Court
Probate and Family Court
In the interests of: Elizabeth F Hutton
Of: Brighton, MA

RESPONDENT Incapacitated Person/Protected Person

To the named Respondent and all other interested persons, a petition has been filed by Barbara J Epstein of ACTON, MA, David S Caplan of ACTON, MA, Department of Mental Health Boston of Westborough, MA in the above captioned matter requesting that the court:

Suffolk Probate and Family Court
24 New Chardon Street, Boston, MA 02114

Terminate the Guardianship and/or Conservatorship

The petition asks the court to make a determination that the Guardian and/or Conservator should be allowed to resign, or should be removed for good cause; or that the Guardianship and/or Conservatorship is no longer necessary and therefore should be terminated. The original petition is on file with the court.

You have the right to object to this proceeding. If you wish to do so, you or your attorney must file a written appearance at this court on or before 10:00 A.M. on the return date of 03/27/2018. This day is NOT a hearing date, but a deadline date by which you have to file the written appearance if you object to the petition. If you fail to file the written appearance by the return date, action may be taken in this matter without further notice to you. In addition to filing the written appearance, you or your attorney must file a written affidavit stating the specific facts and grounds of your objection within 30 days after the return date.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

The outcome of this proceeding may limit or completely take away the above-named person's right to make decisions about personal affairs or financial affairs or both. The above-named person has the right to ask for a lawyer. Anyone may make this request on behalf of the above-named person. If the above-named person cannot afford a lawyer, one may be appointed at State expense.

Aries Work until you have mastered what you want to present. Winging it may have worked in the past, but this time you will have to get your facts straight.

Taurus Open up and let others know where you stand and what you intend to do. Taking control will give you a sense of freedom and the ability to get what you want.

Gemini Little gestures can turn into a big deal if you are forthright in the way you go about helping others. What you receive in return will surprise you.

Cancer Participate in group endeavors to work alongside people from all walks of life. The information and experience you gain will encourage positive personal changes.

Leo Stay under budget and don't promise more than you can deliver. Timing is important, along with emotional control to avoid a misunderstanding that affects relationships.

Virgo Address an issue you have with a friend, relative or colleague. Keep an open mind to find a way to turn a negative into a positive.

Libra Make every moment count. Look for the positive in change that comes your way. Accepting others and doing your best with what you've got will lead to peace of mind.

Scorpio Before you make a purchase, consider your motives. If you're on an emotional spending spree, stop. Only spend your money on something that can help you advance.

Sagittarius Put more energy into how you earn your living or your volunteer work. Being responsible will give you a greater sense of self-worth and confidence.

Capricorn How you were raised and the way you handle money and domestic situations will elevate you comfort. Ease your stress by knowing what's right and then doing it.

Aquarius Avoid arguments with peers or relatives. If you don't agree, do your own thing. Arguing will be a waste of time and will make matters worse. Avoid excessive behavior.

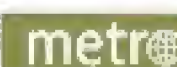

Pisces Be grateful and use what is offered to help spin things your way. Don't ignore or dismiss what you can be achieving. EUGENIA LAST
